

About Otenta

Otenta is an independent product design and making studio of sustainable home & living objects for the contemporary lifestyle. Objects that seek to combine design and functionality with handcrafting, using natural materials.

Otenta creates objects for the daily life of those people who are passionate about design and who also share a philosophy of life based in owning less things but special and authentic ones.

The studio-workshop is located in A Cidade Vella, the medieval neighbourhood of A Coruña (North-Western Spain) that used to host traditional trades in the past.

About me

I was born in 1980 in A Coruña, Spain. From a very young age I have always loved to pick up anything within reach, take it apart and use it to create new stuff.

I studied at the Elisava School of Design in Barcelona (2000-2004) where I used to dream of one day creating iconic designs such as those made by my favorite designers: Charles & Ray Eames, Dieter Rams, Arne Jacobsen and Naoto Fukasawa.

In 2016, after several years gathering experience, working as a freelancer and some failed attempts at launching my own products, I decided to go back to basics: back to creating gadgets with my own two hands. And so I find myself again surrounded by scissors, tools and glue.

Ever since I have been working passionately for those who love designer products, collaborating with marketplaces and other means that help me reach those clients looking for unique objects, and brands they can relate to which reflect their values and views on life.

My collection of objects intends to reflect these principles and my views on design and consumerism.

I love facing the design of a common product and finding a solution that results in a unique and original object that makes it special and authentic.
